ABOUT THE FILM: The Legend of El Chupacabra is an off-the-wall sci-fi horror comedy about a nerdy cryptozoologist (think Bigfoot) who has been obsessed with El Chupacabra ever since he encountered the creature as a young boy.

Eight years later, Pete Mackey is still on the hunt for the Chupacabra. When townsfolk start to disappear again, Pete reunites his "Chupacabra Club" to honor the blood oath they swore as kids to "rid the town of the beast" once and for all.

The crew's pursuit of El Chupacabra leads them to a secret underground compound right beneath their town and pits them against an elite squad of mercenaries deployed by a shadowy global corporation bent on world domination. Pete's team must square off against the soldiers, destroy the Chupacabra and save the town.

The Legend of El Chupacabra is a sci-fi horror-comedy inspired by classic 80s films like "E.T." and "The Goonies." It's laugh-out-loud funny with a tone reminiscent of "Austin Powers" and recent horror-comedy smash "Cocaine Bear."

About the Director: Rob Mabry is the writer/director/producer of The Legend of El Chupacabra. He has produced over twenty short comedy films that have screened at film festivals across the globe. This project is the culmination of his lifelong dream to make a feature-length comedy film.

About the Creature: El Chupacabra (Spanish for "goat sucker") is a "cryptid" believed to inhabit Texas and Mexico. The film's version of Chupacabra was brought to life by creature effects artist Sergio Guerra, known for his appearance as a competitor in season one of Syfy's "Face Off," the creature effects artist competition. Guerra brought his own unique vision to the design of the Chupacabra to create a monster worthy of this B-movie send-up.
